About The Guest(s): Dr. Brian Ardis is a healthcare consultant and researcher who has dedicated his life to uncovering the truth about medical treatments and advocating for patient rights. He has extensive knowledge in the fields of pharmacology, toxicology, and natural health, and has been actively involved in exposing the dangers of certain medical practices and medications.

Summary: Dr. Brian Ardis discusses the use of snake venom in mRNA gene therapy and COVID-19 vaccines. He reveals that snake venom phosphodiesterase is used in the creation of mRNA gene therapy and COVID-19 vaccines, as stated in research papers funded by the National Institutes of Allergies and Infectious Diseases. He explains that snake venom phosphodiesterase is a component in snake venom that damages and cuts RNA, and that it is used in combination with other enzymes found in snake venom to kill prey. Dr. Ardis also uncovers that snake venom phosphodiesterase can be purchased for research purposes, and that it is destroyed by certain substances such as glutathione, inacetylcysteine, vitamin C, and EDTA. He further reveals that snake venom proteins have been found in the blood and feces of COVID-19 patients, and that these proteins can cause various symptoms and diseases, including blood clotting, angioedema, glioblastoma brain tumors, type 1 diabetes, Parkinson's disease, and myocarditis. Dr. Ardis emphasizes the importance of nicotine as an antidote to snake venom, and recommends the use of nicotine patches to counteract the effects of venom in the body. He also encourages listeners to question mainstream narratives and put their faith in the natural abilities of the human body.

Snake venom phosphodiesterase is used in mRNA gene therapy and COVID-19 vaccines to cleave RNA.

He concludes by sharing his mission to bring the truth to light and provide an antidote to the misinformation surrounding COVID-19.

Dr. Artis is a medical professional with expertise in venom research and the effects of venom on the human body. He has conducted extensive research on snake venoms and their impact on various bodily functions. Dr. Artis is known for his in-depth knowledge of venomous creatures and their toxins.

Dr. Artis discusses the potential effects of snake venom and weaponized venom proteins on the human body. He explains that certain venom proteins, such as L amino acid oxidase, can lead to miscarriages or infertility. However, he also provides solutions to counteract the effects of these venom proteins, including the use of EDTA, zinc, infrared saunas, and maintaining an alkaline pH level.

Additionally, Dr. Artis highlights the issue of blood clots in individuals who have received the COVID-19 vaccine. He suggests that an elevated D dimer test can indicate the presence of blood clots in the body. He also mentions the development of a self-assembling nanoparticle hydrogel by the Department of Defense, which can create blood clots that are resistant to natural breakdown processes.

Furthermore, Dr. Artis warns about the potential side effects of GLP one drugs, such as Ozempic and Wagovi, which are used for weight loss and diabetes. He explains that these drugs are derived from Gila monster venom and can lead to thyroid cancers, kidney and liver failure, and diabetic retinopathy.

Dr. Artis also addresses the concept of shedding, where individuals who have been vaccinated can transmit venom-producing bacteria and yeast to others through touch, kissing, sex, or breast milk.
